

Don't expect our tea to darken fast

It takes more than a couple of dunks in your cup to get color out of Salada. And if you know tea, you know that's a good sign. It shows what our tea bags are made of: tea leaves, not tea dust. Sure, tea dust gives you hurry-up color (water works fast on those powdered tea particles). But tea dust just can't give you the great taste of tea (when tea leaves get broken down so fine, a lot of flavor gets rubbed away, too). It is the choice tea leaves that give Salada its taste. Not harsh. Not brash. But smooth. Civilized. And above all, subtle. We wouldn't trade that for fast color. Why should you? (You get the same rare subtle tea taste in Salada Instant Tea. 100% tea, 100% Salada.)

Cambridge and Somerville Told Rail Route Inner Belt Inadvisable

By A. S. PLOTKIN
A yes-or-no answer on a proposal to run the Inner Belt Highway over the Boston & Albany Railroad tracks in Cambridge and Somerville will be forthcoming in about 10 days.

This assurance to officials of those two cities, came yesterday from State Public Works Commissioner Jack Ricciardi at separate meetings.

But D.P.W. engineers, and private consultants indicated strongly the proposal to run a double-deck highway over the B. & A.'s Grand Junction branch was not to their liking.

Fear Increased Congestion

A study showed, they said, that it would provide much poorer traffic service than other proposed routes; would lack adequate service roads and ramps, and increase traffic congestion in nearby streets.

In addition, the D.P.W. survey showed that, while fewer homes would be taken, the rail route would displace far more businesses with a consequent loss of jobs.

Said Ricciardi: "I personally feel that the loss of jobs is more important than the loss of homes. The human element is important, but it won't survive if that weekly pay check goes."

In his inaugural message, Gov. Volpe had criticized D.P.W. for being "delinquent" in pushing the $150 million Inner Belt.

Asked yesterday if he had discussed the morning and afternoon meetings with Volpe, Ricciardi replied with a slight smile, "Gov. Volpe is aware of them."

The commissioner also indicated that a final decision on fixing a definite line for the total circumferential expressway should not be far away.

The railroad route study was made after hundreds of incensed citizens of Cambridge and Somerville roared disapproval last May 10, at a Hills Road "Obsession" public hearing, of other suggested routes.

Only one person, Somerville Public Works Commissioner Edward T. Brady, displayed yesterday the intense emotion that marked the May hearing.

The state government, charged Brady, is "obsessed" with the idea of building costly highways, and is ignoring the needs of the M.T.A. and rail commuters.

Cities and towns, he charged, are being "bisected and dissected" with toll roads and freeways.

"Somerville is literally being cut to pieces . . . I suggest we declare a moratorium on highway construction."

At the morning meeting, Cambridge officials displayed little uniformity of opinion. Mayor Edward A. Crane wanted a tunnel across Cambridge; State Sen. Francis X. McCann urged D.P.W. use a widened Memorial Drive.

Councilor Andrew T. Trodden and others felt that Cambridge could do very well without any Inner Belt.

May Widen Central Artery

Ricciardi stressed the importance of "breakdown" lanes. The congestion on the Central Artery in downtown Boston, he added, has proved the need for such breakdown lanes and D.P.W. is now studying the feasibility of erecting, at intervals, on Central Artery such lanes, Ricciardi disclosed.

These might be "cantilevered" out from the existing structure hanging like a shelf over the street below.

A double-deck elevated expressway, such as the Cambridge-Somerville rail route would require, normally would not have such breakdown lanes, Ricciardi said.

The Federal Bureau of Public Roads, which would pay 90 percent of the cost, will now pay for adding such shoulders to viaducts, according to Charles E. Hall, the Massachusetts representative of that agency.
